

INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDY WARSAW

The Stanislaw Brzozowski Association established the Institute for Advanced Study in Warsaw dedicated to conducting academic research and didactic activity on the most crucial and timely problems of contemporary culture and society. The founders of the Institute are motivated by a desire to create a friendly environment, conducive to searching for answers regarding the current crisis in liberal democracy, resulting from a breakdown in social bonds and social imagination. Taking into account that no reflection can replace action and direct engagement motivated by society's needs, we also understand the necessity of a space for contemplation free from any direct obligations or practical dimensions.

The Institute means to align itself with traditions of similar research outposts (other Institutes for Advanced Study) that are not affiliated with any political parties, or party organizations; that take advantage financial support only on the condition of preserving autonomy in the sphere of actual research and research interests; that anticipate long-term research objectives, breaking the pre-ordained boundaries of traditional disciplines; and that collaborate with other research institutes and organizations, as equal partners.

The Institute is composed of: A board of Trustees, comprised of designated members of the Academic or Cultural spheres; permanent fellows, who, along with a group of coordinators, plan research actions and supervise the development of the institution; and visiting fellows, who work on their own research projects, which constitute independent research, seminars and lectures, debates with invited guests, publications of segments of their research results, and conclude with a book compilation. The Institute also offers scholarships for inviting international researchers to Poland, as well as sending Poles abroad for research purposes.

Apart from the group of Permanent Fellows, there is a permanent associate with the Institute for Advanced Study,

Prof. Jerzy HAUSNER (1949) – Polish economist, lecturer at Cracow University of Economics. From 1994 to 1996 Hausner served as Director-General of the Prime Minister’s Office. In that capacity, he was in charge of a group of advisers to Grzegorz Kołodko—then the Deputy Prime Minister responsible for the economy. In February 1997, in the Government of Prime Minister Włodzimierz Cimoszewicz, he was appointed Undersecretary of State at the Prime Minister’s Chancery and Government’s Commissioner for Social Security Reform. He was charged with developing an implementation timetable for social security reform, the operational establishing principles of pension funds, as well as with an ex-ante evaluation of the implementation costs of the new social security system, and with designing a financing scheme. He specializes in political economy, economics and public administration. Hausner is an author or co-author of over 300 academic publications.

The Institute commenced on October 11, 2012. The opening lecture on the ‘Challenges for the Century’ was delivered by Prof. Zygmunt Bauman. In the fall 2012 we also host, among others, Prof. Claus Offe (talking about the idea of progress in 21st century), Prof. Irena Grudzinska-Gross, Prof. Boris Kagarlitsky and Prof. Slavoj Žižek. Our guests also take part in discussion panels in several cities throughout Poland. Events in Moscow and Kiev are currently planned.

There are 14 projects currently carried out in the first semester of the Institute’s operations, including seminars, research projects, workshops and publishing projects. We cooperate with well-acknowledged academics and intellectuals, who are often also engaged in social projects and public activities.
